

Knowledge Organiser: History

Key Vocabulary:

defend attack invade king queen rule
Normans
William the Conqueror
Elizabeth I
Elizabeth II
trebuchet siege tower battering ram

This half term, children will be learning about the structure of castles, who lived and worked there and how they were defended and attacked. Children will gain knowledge of two significant queens, past and present: Queen Elizabeth I and Queen Elizabeth II.

Key Knowledge:

A castle is a type of home from the past that was built to protect the people inside from their enemy invaders.

A castle is made up of many different parts, not just one building.

The main building inside the castle is the keep, which was protected by walls and towers.

Castles were often built on hills so that enemies could be seen approaching from a distance.

Trebuchets, siege towers and battering rams were used by enemies.

The first castle in England was built by the Normans, who invaded and conquered England.

The Normans built castles to help them defend the land that they had just conquered.

William the Conqueror had some of England's most famous castles built, including Windsor Castle and the White Tower at the Tower of London.

Early castles were made from wood, but they could be easily destroyed by fire.

Later castles were built of stone which was stronger and harder to destroy.

Queen Elizabeth II is our queen and she lives at Windsor castle.

Queen Elizabeth I was imprisoned by her sister in the Tower of London when she was a princess. She lived at Windsor castle when she was queen.

